This brand new river cruise ship, built specifically for sailing the Mekong Delta, will take a select number of pioneering minded passengers from Vietnam's vibrant Ho Chi Minh City (Saigon), to the gorgeous Temples of Angkor Wat in Siem Reap, Cambodia, in superior comfort and in a leisurely 10 days/9 nights.

Enhanced with Burmese teak wood, the RV INDOCHINE is being built in a colonial style reflecting the resplendent eras of yesteryear. Her refined setting, combined with the newest technological innovations will ensure that passengers have the highest level of comfort and safety available along the Mekong.

The RV INDOCHINE will feature 24 oversized (14 sqm) outside facing twin cabins spread over 2 decks, for a maximum capacity of only 48 passengers. Her public areas will include a one sitting restaurant featuring superb, French influenced cuisine, a Lounge and a Cocktail Bar on the covered sun deck allowing for up close views of the unspoiled countryside. She will be serviced by a young and enthusiastic crew of 26 Cambodians and Vietnamese, complemented by a European Chef and English speaking Cruise Manager.

Her completion date is set for July 2008 and her launch date is scheduled for October, 2008.
